

Woltelserhun's story

Woltelserhun Aoane lives with her husband and seven children in Hosana, Ethiopia. When the drought struck, the family's crops died and Woltelserhun couldn't feed her family. Two of her children suffered from malnutrition.

"My baby daughter was very thin like the grass and my son's legs, arms, stomach and face became swollen."

SCIAF funded a feeding centre run by Catholic Church in Hosana, and Woltelserhun took her children there to receive help.

"On the way to the clinic my son was so weak he couldn't walk anymore. I was crying, I thought he was going to die. I was praying to God to save him."

The children were treated at the clinic for almost two months.

"If we hadn't had this help and support, I or my children would have died. Thank you. Your help has saved our lives."
